I've been getting on really well at university, it's been great to be around like-minded people who appreciate design as much as I do. I've joined the Climbing & Mountaineering Society since I've been an avid climber for a couple of years and being able to climb with a large group is so much fun.

Overall, I'm really enjoying my degree so far and the experience of living on my own, especially in a city as vibrant as Nottingham. I've just started a long individual project and it's nice to finally get to do proper Product Design work like research and ideation. At some point, I also want to try and work on my own self-generated projects in addition to degree work to boost my portfolio. I'm really excited to see what I can work on in the future!
