I really enjoyed my time at Carmel. I worked hard for my grades but also achieved them due to the wide range of support I received for which I am very thankful.

"Oxford was extremely intimidating at first, a world-known institution in a city with a very different culture to that in Liverpool. However, it didn't take long to find my feet and engage with the university socially and participate in opportunities whenever possible.

I am so far loving the course a lot more than I imagined. It is very heavily literature based and I'm even studying works from the 13th century, but I have grown to love literature which is a huge progression from English literature GCSE. I use all my A levels differently with problem solving skills and critical analysis which is allowing me to excel.

Outside of the degree, I'm part of the university boxing club which involves intense training but opportunities like being able to fight boxers from Cambridge university at some point. The opportunities outside of academia at Oxford University are endless. I miss home, but I have settled into Oxford very nicely."
