I really enjoyed my time in Carmel and made lots of friends . I think college is a great balance between freedom & responsibility; the work is definitely tough, but all my courses were interesting, engaging, and well taught.

I left Carmel and pursued my BSc in Neuroscience at the University of Central Lancashire (UCLan). It was the natural progression and convergence from my interests in Biology and Psychology from Carmel.

I became fascinated with how the brain interprets music, and did my dissertation on music & problem-solving, using ElectroEncephaloGraphy (EEG). I had to beg all the laboratory leads to give up valuable testing time to let me do this project, and thankfully they took me seriously and I was allowed to do it. I graduated from UCLan with a First-Class (Hons).

Now I am back in education studying MSc Neuroimaging at the University of Manchester. My goal is to get onto a PhD next and pursue a career as a University Academic.
