I really enjoyed my time at Carmel, especially studying Law as it helped me realise what I wanted to do.

"I loved my time at uni, I worked in my college bar and got involved in powerlifting and mock trial societies. I'm so glad I moved away and I've definitely made friends that are more like family these days. I think the best bit of advice I can give is to try and engage in your subject outside of your academics. Do extra reading and join in mock trial societies or debating clubs. Try and find an area of interest and do some research into it. This will give you something great to talk about in your personal statement!

I've just graduated from Hertford College, Oxford after studying Law. I'm currently doing my LPC and interning at a law firm and I'm planning to start a training contract in London over the next few years."
